A GREAT SURPRISE.

J. J. Ridgway Appointed Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia.

RUSS, HARRISON'S MAN SNUBBED.

The President Helps Quay to Get Out of a Perplexing Situation.

A PACTIONAL PIGHT NEATLY AVOIDED.

The Western Part of the State Not Quite Forgotten in the Shuffle.

. The President vesterday filled two important offices in Philadelphia by the appointment of Thomas J. Powers as Naval Officer and J. J. Ridgway Surveyor of the Port. Mr. Ridgway's appointment was a complete surprise, as a college chum of Russell Harrison's was thought to be slated for the place. The selection, though, gives satisfaction to the politicians.

IFROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, November 29,-Two offices which have caused the Pennsylvania Senators and the President probably more trouble than any other half dozen of offices in the Keystone State, were disposed of finally to-day in the appointment of Thomas J. Powers to be N aval Officer, and J. J. Bidgway to be Surveyor of the Port at Philadelphia. The appointment of Powers was expected, but that of Ridgway was probably a surprise to everybody except the Possible of the Powers and King, of New Haven. The 14 survivors and the remains of the engineer were taken on heard and brought to the contract of the power was and the remains of the engineer were taken on heard and brought to the contract of the power were taken on heard and brought to the contract of the power to be boat particular to the power to be boat particular to the power to the life raft, and when the boat particular to the power to the powe President and the Pennsylvania Senators. Ridgway was not known as an applicant, his name had not been mentioned as a possibility in any of the Philadelphia papers.

All of the Eastern Pennsylvania correspondents were put into a condition bordering on frenzy by the surprise, and everybody wanted to know what had become of Mr. Russell Harrison's friend, Walters, of Chester, who everybody had been assured by everybody else, was sure to get the place. WHY OUAY SMILED.

Senator Quay smiled broadly this evening at the little surprise he had sprung upon the public, and explained his previous perfeet silence in regard to Ridgway by saying that so long as there was a chance-for Leeds or Leland he did not care to mention the new candidate, who had really not been an applicant for the position and would probably be as much surprised at his appoint-

There seemed to be finally insuperable obstacles in the way of the appointment of either Leland or Leeds. Factional disputes could not be wholly composed. The President was confused and did not know what to do. Untimately, as a settlement of the vexed question, Senator Quay agreed to the name of Ridgway, who had been attorney of the Reform Committee, a member of the Committee of One Hundred, a candidate for Sheriff who was defeated by "the boys" be-cause of his connection with the "reform movement." The appointments are gener-ally commended as strong ones by Philadelphians, and are certainly satisfactory to the Pennsylvania Senators and their friends.

THE WEST NOT LEFT Neither was the western part of the State entirely left out in the cold in the matter of appointments, as the Secretary of the Treasury decided to appoint ex-Sheriff Kyle, of Mercer county, a special agent of the Treasury. It is a very desirable position.

Ex-Congressman Samuel H. Miller was in the city a few days ago, to urge the appointment, and since that time Senator Quay has given special attention to the matter, with to-day's result. Mr. Kyle is a very popular and influential politician of the "Messer diocese," and his appointment will give

The appointment of Mr. J. R. Harrah, of Beaver, to the Marshalship of Western Pennsylvania, will doubtless be announced Thursday of next week, as that is "Attorney General's day" with the President. Very soon after that will follow the appointment of a successor to Surveyor Barr, for which place, as has been frequently stated, there are more than among them being Dravo, Case, Brown McPheeters and Vogleson. It appears that an impression has gained currency that there is some confusion in the office of Sur-veyor Barr on account of the probability that the incumbent will soon retire, and it is therefore probable the Secretary will make a change very soon. Mr. William Vogleson, of Allegheny, has exceedingly strong backing, and many think he will prove the winner.

As to the postoffice, there will probably be no further action until the expiration of the four years' term of Mr. Larkin. LIGHTNER.

RIDGWAY WAS A SURPRISE. Philadelphia Politicians Astonished, but None the Less Well Pleased.

SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH. PHILADELPHIA, November 22.-The appointment by President Harrison to-day of Thomas J. Powers as Naval Officer and John J. Ridgway as Surveyor of the Port of Philadelphia gives general satisfaction to the politicians, though the appointment of Ridgway is a complete surprise. He had scarcely been mentioned for the office. It was generally expected that Captain Walters, of Phoenixville, would get the Surveyorship because he was known to be backed by Russell Harrison, whose chum he was at

Though Ridgway, who was once Sheriff by appointment, could not be elected to any office in this city, as proved by his overwhelming defeat for City Controller some years ago, the politicians prefer him to Walters, who is a country man and not much known here. Ridgway is also acceptable to the reformers, with whom he trained when he first started in politics. About the only disappointed persons here are the friends of George F. Leland, and they are not very numerous. Ridgway is a man of large means. Powers is a professional and Crew Saved. NEW LONDON, November 22,-The Old Dominion steamship Manhattan which left New York for West Point, Vs., at 4 o'clock last Tuesday afternoon, with 35 passengers, collided with the schooner Agnes Manning, from Baltimore for New York, and went to the bottom. The vessel's crew numbered 32. She also carried three steerage passengers.

The Manhattan sank within ten minutes after she was struck. Only one boat could after she was struck. Only one boat could be lowered. The following named managed to save their lives by getting into the boat: Captain H. N. Jenny, First Mate Joseph P. N. Davis, Second Mate Olof Nelson, Steward Joseph Garcia, Quarter-Master Fred Olsen, Oller Harrig Vogtlander, Seamen Henry Walling, John Nelson and Andrew Anderson, Fireman William McKensie. Coalpasser Thomas Pritchard, McKensie, Coalpasser Thomas Pritchard, Waiter William Sharp, Cook Lewis Cook, Messman James Barnes. The Manhattan topmasts were above water. The Quartermaster was taken from one of the masts and near him was the lifeless body of Engineer Hayden. The quartermaster made almost superhuman efforts to save the engineer. He passed him also a line, telling him to put it under his arms, but Hayden did not have strength. The bowline was made fast to the engineer's wrist, but Olsen did not raise him above the water, and he was drowned, the body being taken in the boat. The rest of the crew, 11 in number, and three passengers, two black, one white, got on the life raft, and when the boat rayled company all seemed safe for a on board and brought to this port.

A MISSING KNIGHT OF PYTHIAS.

Neither Salcide Nor Foul Play Theories Taken Into Account.

(SPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.) CARBONDALE, November 22,-John Carhuff left his family in this city some six months ago, and went to Bradford, where he accepted a place as superintendent for a firm of contractors. On the night of November 5 he disappeared from that place, and has not been seen since. Efforts of the police and friends to find him or some clew as to his whereabouts have been in vain. He was seen as late as 11 o'clock on the night of his disappearance, when a friend left him within a square of his boarding place. There is no apparent reason for supposing that he committed suicide. The theory of foul play has been advanced, but there is as vet nothing to support it. Carhuff was a Knight of Pythias, and the fraternity throughout the country have been notified.

A REVOLUTION IN CUBA.

Vague Rumors to That Effect Circulated, but No News Received.

LONDON, November 22 .- Persistent rumors are afloat in London to-day to the effect that there is a revolution in progress in the Island of Cuba. Dispatches from Paris report that the same rumors are current there and are exciting attention. So far it has been impossible to trace the rumors to any definite source, and the supposition is that they have sprung up through the belief that the peaceful revolution in Brazil would be likely to exert a powerful influence with the discontented republican element in Cuba.

The fact that there is a strict censorship of news dispatches at Havana, makes it possible for a revolutionary movement to get under way before any definite intel-ligence could reach the outside world.

HIS GUILT ADMITTED.

Charles B. Wigton Confesses That He Forged a Number of Notes,

AGGREGATING AT LEAST $66,500.

His Losses Mostly Due to Gambling "Instead of Other Speculation.

In Which They Say They Must Let All Their Notes Go to Protest.

The Secretary-Treasurer of the Glamorgan Iron Company, Charles B. Wigton, yesterday confessed himself a forger of notes amounting to at least $66,500, many of which were negotiated through country banks. The firm of Ario Pardee & Co., the financial sufferers by the forgeries, have issued a circular, saying that they must allow all their outstanding notes to go to protest, in order to ascertain just which ones are forged.

ISPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.

PHILADELPHIA, November 22.—Charles B. Wigton, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Giamorgan Iron Company, who is held under $15,000 bail on the charge of forgery in reissuing a paid note for $10,000 indorsed by A. Pardee & Co., James Long, R. B. Wigton and G. T. Roberts, made a full confession to-day of having reissned paid notes, indorsed by the same parties, aggregating $66,500. "He made the confession," said Major John R. Fell, of Ario Pardee & Co., "in the presence of Mr. Edward Smith, a member of Charles Smith & Sons, brokers, who negotiated the notes, and myself.

"The amount of altered paper, Wigton confessed, amounts to $56,500, beside the $10,000 note for which he is held. The notes are for the sums of $20,000, $10,000, three of $6,000 each, and one of $8,500, and have been negotiated through concerns in Bellefonte, Lewistown, Altoona and other country towns in Pennsylvania. We have not as yet been able to ascertain whether this is a correct statement of the full amount of altered paper. More spurious notes may have been issued, though it is not likely."

A PECULIAR POSITION. The firm of Ario (not Aaron) Pardee & Co., in consequence of the forgery, to-day issued the following statement:

Within the last three days fraud has been developed in the affairs of the Glamorgan Iron Company, which has caused no little sensation, and has taken the community by surprise. It appears that the notes of the Glamorgan Iron Company, indorsed by R. B. Wigton & Sons, James Long, A. Pardee & Co., and G. Theodore Roberts have from time to time been paid, and thus passed into the hands of the Glamorgan Iron Company. C. B. Wigton was the Trossurer of the company and R. B. Wigton was the President. Recently it has been discovered that the old notes thus paid have been altered as to date and time of payment, and then reissued and sold. To what extent the fraud has been perpetrated is not yet known, but the treasurer has given a list of such notes amounting to over $50,000. Under these circumstances the indorsers have determined that they will allow all notes now maturing togo to protest, so that they may be able to find where the notes are, and then, by a thorough investigation into the books and accounts of the company, ascertain, if possible, what of these notes are genuine and what are fraudulent. They are prepared to pay such of them as are genuine notes, but they do not regard themselves as liable for those which have been fraudulently issued, and the course they have determined to pursue has been adopted as the only method of ascertaining for them what notes they are are really responsible for. They adopt this course with regret, as they do not is to the paying the genuine notes at maturity, but it is the only one left to them to protect themselves against the fraud which has been perpetrated.

ONLY BAN A SHORT TIME. issued the following statement:

Mr. Edward Smith, of the firm of Charles Smith & Sons, brokers, said that Mr. Wigton in his confession said his forgeries date back to September, 1889. "We have negotiated paper for the Glamorgan Iron Company," said Mr. Smith, "only during the last six weeks, and the $10,000 note for which he is held is the only spurious paper we have handled of that company. I desire to say this because it has been incorrectly stated that we have negotiated all of the spurious paper for the Glamorgan Iron Company. The report that the note in question," added Mr. Smith, "had been sold to us for $6,000 is also erroneous. We took the note at our ordinary rate of interest, and the $6,000 was only loaned on the note."

It was stated to-day that the crooked treasurer did not reissue the paid notes to pay off his losses in stock speculation, but to pay gambling debts. "I understand," said a prominent banker to-day, "that Mr. Richard B. Wigton has often paid off his son Charles' gambling debts, and it is to this source I believe the money has gone." Charles B. Wigton's further hearing will take place before Magistrate Durham on Tuesday next.

LATE LIGHTS.

Complaints That the Streets Are Not Illuminated Early Enough.

The police officials in the lower part of the city have been receiving numerous complaints during the past few days about the electric lights on the streets not being lighted early enough in the evening. Last evening probably a dozen persons called at Central station to ask Inspector McAleese about the matter, saying that although it was dark at 5:30 the arc lights were not burning until long after 6 o'clock. In the present muddy condition of the streets this was very undesirable, and as most of the business houses are closed by that time an excellent opportunity is afforded to thieve to ply their vocation. The Inspector will investigate the matter to-day and will sak to have the streets illuminated earlier.

Hopper's Lust Season. It was rumored in the city yesterday that important changes were about to occur in the management and personnel of the Mc-Caull Opera Company, at present performing in this city. It was hinted that Colonel John McCaull contemplated relinquishing the reins of management, and that, as a consequence, a reorganization of the company would follow. In this con nection it was stated that there was a possi-A CIRCULAR ISSUED BY PARDEE & CO., bility of Mr. De Wolf Hopper, and Colonel McCaull's business manager, Mr. Benjamin Stevens, forming an alliance for the purpose of putting another opera troupe on the road next season. That these statements were without foundation, or were, at least, rather premature, was ascertained yesterday in the course of conversation with Madame Cottrelly, Mr. De Wolf Hopper and Mr. Stevens.

Madame Cottrelly is directly responsible for the production of the operas, and, representing Colonel McCauli in so far as the active management of the company is concerned, is in a position to speak authoritatively on the matter. In the course of conversation yesterday afternoon, Madame Cottrelly denied that there was any contemplated disbanding of the company. Said

"The rumors you mention are a repetition of those which arose from time to time during the last year, and which were founded, I imagine, mainly on the condition of Mr. McCaull's health. There is really nothing to suppose that any breaking up of the company will occur, either now or in the future. We are going steadily along, filling our dates, proceeding very smoothly, and closing contracts for next season. Mr. McCauli takes as active a share in the management of the company as if he were with us. We advise with him on everything we do; send him messages every night of our receipts, and experience as much advantage from his direction and supervision as we should were direction and supervision as we should were he here. I think that the present rumor is due, perhaps, to the fact that Mr. McCaull, not very long ago, was robbed of a very valuable gold watch and $100 one night, while sleeping in his hotel with his bedroom door open. He was so violently ill next morning as to induce him to believe that he must have been drugged by the thief to enable him the more readily to accomplish his object. This attack threw Mr. McCaull back in his recovery from the paralytic stroke, a recovery which, up to that time, he was making, it slowly, yet surely. The doctors in attendance on him positively affirm that his final recovery is only a matter of time-provided he takes care of himself-and I, for one, confidently look forward to his resuming his accustomed position with relation to his company at no distant time. Meanwhile everything is going on smoothly, and I think you may rest assured that the McCaull Opera Company will continue in existence for a long while to come. I believe I may say with confidence that Mr. McCaull takes so much interest in his company, and is so attached to the work in connection with it, that the transference of his interests in it to other hands is probably the last thing he would dream of it.

"I don't know of any contemplated changes in the company," said De Wolf Hopper, yesterday evening. "Any stories connecting me with it in a financial or managerial way are devoid of truth. Such rumors as you refer to are not new, and are due, very probably, to Mr. McCaull's state of health, which is not of the best. I am not all concerned with the management, which is very thoroughly attended to by Madame Cottrelly and Mr. Stevens.

"Have you any intention of severing your connection with the company, Mr. Hopper?"
"Yes. I think this will be my last season inge. Two or three very good things are open to me and I am just about making up my mind as to what I shall do." Mr. Stevens, when seen in connection with the reported disintegration of the opera company, said that, as far as he was con cerned, he was unaware of anything ap-proaching a change in the present condition of things. He had not any intention of re tiring, and regarding the rumor that De Wolf Hopper intended starring next season under his management, there was nothing in it. A man of such ability as Mr. Hopper was always sure of having plenty of CHICAGO, November 22. - During the noon recess of the Cronin trial Budenbender, the witness from Hoboken, N. J., who yesterday testified that it was not a white horse which took Dr. Cronin away May 4, was arrested. Officer Lindville, with his prisoner, was at the corner of Clark and Michigan streets, going to the State Attorney's office, when Mr. Qualey, one of the counsel for the defense, and Mr. Forrest's clerk endeavored to take the prisoner away. A crowd soon collected, but the prisoner was safely landed in the State Attorney's office. As he was ascending the steps on the west side of the Criminal Court building, Mr. Qualey shouted to Budenbender that he would be taken care of, and to keep his mouth shut. At the opening of the afternoon session At the opening of the afternoon session Mr. Forrest, for the defense, asked that the jury be excluded from the room. When this was done he brought up the matter of the taking of witness Budenbender on a forthwith subpensa to the State's Attorney's office during the court's recess. He said that Budenbender, after testifying as to the that Budenbender, after testifying as to the color of the horse which drew Dr. Cronin away Saturday afternoon, was served with a subposens to appear as a witness on behalf of the State; that he (Forrest) called on the State's Attorney last evening and told

HE WOULD KEEP BUDENBENDER in the city till the State had finished with him; that the State's Attorney this morning notified him that he would want bender in court this afternoon, and that he did not care to see him before that time. In spite of this stipulation, however, Mr. For-rest said, Budenbender had been foreibly and illegally, and in the face of a protest on behalf of the defense, taken to the State's Attorney's office during the recess of court. He submitted that everybody connected with the affair was guilty of contempt of court. the affair was guilty of contempt of court.

State-Attorney Longenecker said that he had thought it advisable to have Budenbender summond in the regular way, outside of court. He understood that an officer had a subpœna last evening before the talk with Mr. Forrest, and that this person had been looking for Budenbender since that time. The State's Attorney said he knew nothing shout this officer beyond that and the fact about this officer beyond that, and the fact that the witness was brought in. He knew nothing of the matter until after it had occurred, and was sorry that it had taken AN INDIGNANT JUDGE.

Judge McConnell sad: "That the officer or whoever was guilty of the outrage, if out-rage was committed, is to be punished in some manner, if he laid forcible hands on with it. I have been with it now for six the witness, is unquestionable, and if this years, and have nearly decided to make a court can reach the officer, after being satisfied that such is the ease, whether police officers or not, they will be punished."

Budenbender was then sworn and told his story of the transaction. He said he was subposned to appear at 3 o'clock, and in-tended to obey the summons. He was in the Sherman House at 12:30 o'clock in com pany with Mr. Forrest's clerk, when an officer served him with a forthwith subpone, and compelled him to go with him under penalty of being taken in a patrol wagon. On the way they met Mr. Qualey, one of the attorneys for the defense, and a struggle ensued, Mr. Qualey disputing the officer's right to take the witness. The officer said to witness, "You are my prisoner." The witness was taken to the State's Attorney's office, where, at Mr. Mill's request, he stepped into an inclosure.

Mr. Mills-"May it please your Honor, I desire to inquire so as to be informed of the nature of this inquiry. Certainly the in-quiry should be defined."

. THE COURT'S OBJECT. The Court—"The object of this particular inquiry, so far as this Court is concerned, is to ascertain whether or not anyone, whether police officer or otherwise, has pretended to serve a subposna of this court by arresting a man, and bringing him here by forcible means, when he is under attendance of the court in a regular way."

Mr. Hynes suggested that, as the matter occurred outside of the court, oral testimony could not be taken and the hearing must be based on an affidavit and the Court was inclined to think that that would be the more regular way; but without any definite result being reached, the discussion branched off to the matter of the Lynch deposition. Mr. Forrest said he had gone to Mr. Lynch's house, where he was in-formed that Mr. Lych had recovered and was out. The lady whom he saw said she would endeavor to have him in court at 3

The Budenbender matter then came up again, and Mr. Forrest said he did not intend to proceed any further with it.

NO WRONG INTENDED. The Court said he doubted whether he had jurisdiction. These men were police officers, and it was probably merely a case of over-officiousness. Then the talk branched off, the State accusing the defense of unfair means in order to bring Mrs. Hoertel to their office, and the defense making a like accusation against the State in relation to one of the Hylands. A disclaimer was put in in both cases by the accused parties.

Then Officer Lindeville, who took Budenbender to the State's Attorney office, was put on the stand and told his side of the story. He exhibited the subposns, and said that Ben Williams, the man in charge of the squad detailed on this case by the chief of police, told him to find Budenbender and take him to the State's Attorney's office The rest of the story coincided with that already told, except that the witness said rising alowly. Weather rainy. The that Budenbender came with him willingly and that force was not used. Attorney Qualey, who had advised Buden-bender not to go with the officer, was the next witness. He testified that the officer had threatened to call the patrol wagon and had used force to take Budenbender

A LITTLE DECEPTION. On cross-examination it was shown that the witness had served a subpoena on Mrs. Hoertel this morning that he might bring her to his office to question her; that she refused to come, and that she only consented when he told that the State's Attorney wanted to see her, which was false. The Court then decided the matter was not one of contempt of court, but expressed the opinion that it was an outrage on the per-sonal liberty of Budenbender to take him as if he were a prisoner on a mere subposns. The court then adjourned for the day. It is believed that the defense has nearly finished its presentation of evidence, and that the great trial is nearing the end.

higher rate than would be asked if the goods were sold under their proper name. The Grocers' Association will only push the prosecutions far enough to stop the sales.

The following was adopted:

Resolved, That the Allegheny Grocers' Association prosecute all person or persons engaged in selling eleomargarine, and that defectives be appointed to secure evidence thereon and at once report their offense to this association.

The details were left to the officers, and steps will be taken to put the resolution into effect this morning. It is said that thousands of pounds of eleomargarine are sold in Allegheny. In the market, especially, it can be bought at many stands. The prices asked are the same as for congues butter, at Emptied Into the Body of Stephen Pettus, a Wealthy Broker.

DEATH THE ALMOST INSTANT RESULT.

The Startling Tragedy Huncled Upon the Public Street in New York.

Mrs. Hannah Southworth yesterday shot and killed Stephen Pettus while he was walking on Pulton street, New York. She fired five times, and every bullet took effect, death resulting instantly. Her friends tell a story of cruel wrongs received at the hands of the murdered man.

NEW YORK, November 22 .- Stephen Pettus, Secretary and Treasurer of the Brooklyn Elevated Railroad, commission merchant and member of the Cotton Exchange, was shot down in Fulton street this morning about 10 o'clock by Hannah Southworth, who emptied the five chambers of a 38-caliber revolver into Pettus' head and body. Fulton street was full of persons, whose number was swelled by the crowd just coming from the Fulton ferryboats. A man who saw the shooting said that he had noticed the woman acting strangely at the boat, as though laboring under great excitement.

Both lived in St. Joe, Mich., and had walked all the way to Pittsburg, doing a little peddling on the way. Crate wished to reach Washington, D. C., to collect a pension claim of $2,500. He has the necessary papers with him. He served through the war with Company H, Seventy-third Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers; was a prisoner at Andersonville prison and was As Pettus was walking up Fulton street the woman suddeely sprang forward until close behind him, so near that she might have struck him with her hand. Then she have struck him with her hand. Then she fired five shots from a new silver-plated revolver, each shot taking effect. Pettus staggered and tried to run into the nearest doorway. But the self-cocking pistol of the inturiated woman was too quick for him. Covered with blood he fell against the door, which swung open with his weight, and the dying man ran inside, rushed behind the counter, out again and fell dead in a bloody heap at the foot of the stairway leading to the next floor.

> NO ATTEMPT AT ESCAPE. Officer Goodwin made a rush for the woman who stood motioniess, making no attempt to escape. She alternated between great excitement and periods of utter coolgreat excitement and periods of utter coolness. The body was taken to the station house and laid on the floor. A scrap of coarse sacking covered the dead man's face. On raising it, one could see a frightful little hole over the left eye. The features were distorted and clotted with blood. Lifting the left hand, a bullet hole appeared in the wrist. The dead man's watch was broken and an indentation in the case seemed to have been made by a ball which had passed clear through the body.

badly. One of the sailors known on board as Hans is missing. Captain Birdsall says the unknown went on her course after the collision, without trying to find out the extent of the Manning's damage.

The morning was a little hasy, but bright enough to see some distance ahead, and the collisiou, Captain Birdsall claims, was due to the negligence of those on board the steamer. Mrs. Hannah Southworth is a native of Louisville, Ky. Her father's name was Martin, and during the war, being a member of a family of active Southern sympathizers, he rejused to take the oath of allegiance to the Government; but after some trouble with the Provost Marshal he came North instead of going South. During the war he operated as a gold broker in Wall street in New York City. At the time the family left Louisville, Mrs. Southworth was a little girl, and is now about 35 years old. She is descended on her mother's side from a race of women long remarkable for extreme beauty, her mother, Mrs. Martin, and her aunt, the late Mrs. S. H. Torrey, being ladies especially noted in this particular in their youth. Indeed, Mrs. Southworth's mother is at the present time a very handinto Peyton's livery stable, on Rebecca street street, for the purpose of engaging a carriage to take him home.

Southworth herself grew up con-spicuous likewise for her personal beauty, and in her girlhood was so handsome in her and in her girlhood was so handsome in her personal appearance as to attract universal attention wherever she was seen. In 1874 or 1875, when she was just emerging from her teens, during a visit to the family of her uncle, the late Judge Torrey, at Geneva, N. Y., she met Mr. Frederick Southworth, boat Fearless, of Coos Bay, Captain James a banker of that place, and some two years later they were married. Mr. Southworth died within a year or so after the wedding, Hill, ran on to North Spit, at the mouth of the Umpqua river, on Tuesday evening, and soon went to pieces, not one of the 10 or 15 and his widow returned to Louisville where her father and mother were again

A few years after, her father having died in the meantime, Mrs. Southworth and her mother removed to Brooklyn, where she has two brothers living now and doing business. It was soon after this she was introduced by a mutual friend to Mr. Pettus. She was at this time living at the Pierre-

she was at this time fiving at the Pierrepont House.

The story of her wrongs at the hands of Mr. Pettus, as told by her friends, is a peculiarly atrocious one. According to them she was decoyed to a private house, drugged and assaulted. She naver recovered, physically or mentally, from the shock. A suit brought by her against Pettus for slander and defamation of charceter has been pending for some time. A PREVIOUS ATTACK.

A PREVIOUS ATTACK.

On Friday, March 28, this year, the crowd about the Brocklyn Elevated road saw a sall, willowy blonde woman, in a green tailor-made suit, attack two gentlemen with an umbrella. The men were Stephen Pottus and his brother-in-law, Joseph Elliott. Alterward Mr. Elliott said the attack was made upon him alone. But the woman, who was Mrs. Hannah Southworth, declared she had no acquaintance with Elliott.

"Mrs. Petus struck me when I called on him recently and I intended to give him an opportunity to repeat his assault. As for my carrying a pistol," said Mrs. Southworth afterward, "rest assured if I had had one, it would have been used more effectively than an umbrella. The trouble is a combination of personal and business matters. They are trying to personute and destroy a woman's character," she added at the time.

Mrs. Southworth and her troubles were again before the public on May 16. On that day she was arrested on identically the spot of the first assault. Detective Kenney, who made the arrest, had noted for several days a prepossessing blonde person waiting about the vicinity. PLACED UNDER BOND. Arraigned before Justice Walsh, she was bound over for the sum of $25 to keep the peace. "Stephen Pettus has treated me grossly and will spend $25,000 te hound me down," she said. Again, one Sunday the neighborhood about Mr. Pettus' house was startled by a woman's cries: "I've got you now: I've got you now." The timely intervention of the mounted police is said to have saved Pettus' life on this occasion. Many times since Mrs. Southworth has been seen in the vicinity of Pettus' house and office.
